

FROM ANCIENT TIMES TO "STANMER WEYE"

round things roll and unwield the wheel they used wheels to make cash
and was cherts.

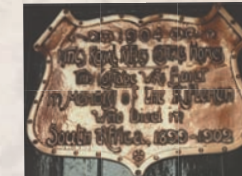

Iron Age
After many years, people called the Celts to our land bringing a new metal called IRON. This was hard er than bronze. And made better tools and weapons.

"I believe they found traces of several round houses
when they build Battery Hill. They even found a body.
I think the remains are in the British Museum now."

Winchester College
from Stanmore Lane
by Richard Baigent

first buildings
on Stanmore Estate

WWI
1914

1918

Iron Age

46BC

Stanmore memory Lane

1841

1848

1904

1910
Coronation
King George V

Bronze
Age

166BC

Carbon dating

Traces: Round houses, pits...

100 YEARS AGO
Saturday, July 25th, 1908
... about 100 years ago...
... the first house built in the Stanmore Lane...
... the first house built in the Stanmore Lane...
... the first house built in the Stanmore Lane...
... the first house built in the Stanmore Lane...

Courtesy of Hampshire Chronicle

When Stanmore might have looked like this

Cromwell Road, Winchester, HANTS
archeological finds; by TVAS

St Cross Hospital and St Catherine's Hill
from Stanmore Lane. by G.F. Prosser - 1848

"My great great granddad, William Eyles was a farmer on Stanmore before it was an estate. He lived in the farm, which was situated just down the road from Kettle Street off Stanmore Lane. From memory he died in 1835, at just over 100 years old. There's a newspaper article I have here where he was interviewed about life on the farm and his old age. He talks about happening on the farm and there's a pic of him. Also, my great granddad and mine all up family gone up and worked on the farm. Although everything was interrupted by the first world war, with many of them going off to fight and sadly they were killed. William Eyles moved into one of the first houses built in Stanmore Lane, with his daughter when he lived up the west of his life. He's buried with his wife in St. Cross."

Andy Eyles